

Two Quiet Minutes Before You Begin

A Story by
SUDHARSAN

THE PAUSE THAT POWERS YOU

Every day we rush from one thing to the next. Checking emails, scrolling through social media, juggling tasks. In all this movement we forget something simple. The moments before action are just as important as the action itself.

Imagine this. Before you start studying, working on a project, or even having an important conversation, you take two quiet minutes. No phone, no distractions. Just you and your breath.

In these two minutes:

- Breathe deeply and notice your body
- Let go of yesterday's worries, tasks, or regrets
- Decide clearly what you want to do in the next moments

Two minutes is not long. But it is long enough to clear your mind, focus your energy, and step forward with confidence.

“It is not the hours you work, but the minutes you take to prepare that make the biggest difference.”

WHY TWO MINUTES MATTERS

Why two minutes? Because it is short enough that you will actually do it, yet long enough to make a real difference. Even science agrees that brief moments of calm and focus help your mind work better, reduce stress, and spark new ideas.

Here is a simple exercise you can try:

1. Sit comfortably and close your eyes
2. Breathe in for four counts, breathe out for four counts. Repeat a few times
3. Ask yourself, “What do I want to create in this next moment?”
4. Picture yourself doing it well. Feel it. Believe it
5. Open your eyes and start

These two minutes become a springboard for everything that comes next. They turn scattered effort into intentional action.

Think of it like warming up before a workout. You would not start lifting weights without stretching first. So why start your day, your work, or your studies without preparing your mind?

YOUR TWO-MINUTE HABIT

Here is the secret. Make it daily. Not when you remember or when you feel like it. Every morning, before a big task, even before a small meeting, take two quiet minutes.

- Short and consistent wins over long and rare
- You will start noticing your patterns, your distractions, your mental blocks
- Each day, you step into your life fully aware and ready

Start today. Close your eyes. Take your two minutes.

Ask yourself:

- What do I want to feel right now?
- What do I want to accomplish?
- How can I step forward fully present?

In the rush of life, two minutes may seem tiny. But in those tiny moments lies the power to change your focus, your energy, and your results.

Your next big step starts here.